ASHVILLE BLOWS UP IN NINTH; LOSES 12 TO 9

Chillicothe, Jeffersonville, Milledgeville Still On Top In SCO

Ashville entry in the South Central Ohio Baseball league lost another game, this time blowing up in the ninth inning after holding a lead most of the way.

The Reds went into the ninth ahead of Sabina, 9-6, but when the inning ended they had lost 12-9. Two hits were scored by Sabina, but a base on balls, wild pitch and three errors let in six runs.

Ashville's big inning was in the third when seven runs were made after Sabina had opened the scoring with four runs. The Reds banged out five hits and took advantage of two bases on balls and errors to score. They added two runs in the fifth.

Sabina got one in the sixth and one in the eighth, then exploded in the ninth.

In other league games Chillicothe, Milledgeville and Jeffersonville won again to stay on top in the league race. Chillicothe won 10-7 at Washington C. H.; Jeffersonville handed Greenfield an 8-3 defeat and Milledgeville drubbed Jamestown 12-1.

ST. PAUL COPS AA LEAD; BIRDS WIN AND LOSE

By United Press
St. Paul held first place in the American Association today through its ability to trim Minneapolis, the rivals from across the Mississippi river, over the weekend.

The Saints did it twice yesterday, trimming the Millers 13-7 and then edging them 6-5. In other scheduled doubleheaders, Kansas City and Milwaukee divided, the Brewers winning 4-1 and then losing 4-2; Indianapolis defeated Louisville 7-6 but the second game was postponed because of rain; Columbus beat Toledo 5-3 and the Mud Hens shaded the Red Birds in the second game 3-2.

In their fight for the top spot of the second division, the Red Birds held it for awhile yesterday at Columbus but when the Mud Hens reversed the decision in the second game they dropped to sixth place. First Baseman Jerry Witte was the batting star in Columbus' 5-3 victory, clouting a three-bagger and a home run with a man on base. Pitcher Creel allowed six hits in the 10-inning second game for Toledo to barely edge the Red Birds 2-1.

VANNEMAN IN NEW POST COLUMBUS—Harry W. Vanneman, member of the Ohio State University faculty since 1928, has been appointed acting dean of the law college. The position has been vacant since the death of Dean Arthur T. Martin on February 7.

NAMED TO "HALL OF FAME"
COLUMBUS—The name of Clifford T. Conklin, Brandon, Vt., secretary of the American Ayreshire Breeders Association and a graduate of Ohio State University's College of Agriculture, will be added to OSU's "Animal Husbandry Alumni Hall of Fame" at ceremonies the evening of May 6.

NEW ARAB STATE?
IS a new nation in the making? The Council of the Arab League, which is a group of small Arab states in the Palestine neighborhood, has voted at its Cairo meeting to provide for a common Arab citizenship. This project, which is to be referred to the separate states for ratification, would give each resident of the countries two nationalities. He would be an inhabitant of Lebanon or Egypt and also an Arab, a possessor of larger citizenship.
This recalls the great days of Arab achievement, when the Mohammedan empire included part of Spain and ran from Morocco eastward almost to China. Arabs have never forgotten those days even in the midst of their bitterest tribal jealousies.
Common citizenship, if agreed upon, would naturally be followed by a customs union, common coinage and perhaps a union of diplomatic departments. The rise of an Arab state in the Near East would profoundly influence countries like Turkey, Great Britain and France, which would have many Arab subjects. It looks as if interesting days might be ahead.
SPRING FOOLISHNESS
THESE Spring days are not only a time of rare enjoyment and exhilaration for living creatures in general, but also a time when boys are just naturally eager to start doing crazy things—as their fathers have probably done before them. Things like this, for instance, reported in the newspapers.
A twelve-year-old boy, playing around with his pals, was seized with what you might call a burning desire to be a fire-eater. He had seen such a performance at a show, and wanted to impress his pals. So he filled his mouth with cigaret lighter fluid and blew it onto a lighted match. The result can be imagined. He is said to be still in the hospital, with severe second degree burns on his face and hands. Will other reckless lads profit by his foolishness?
Boys and gardens seldom agree, but they can be tempted into growing things for themselves, if parents will praise every flower and vegetable.
The human race now seems to be in a general state of grudge and grouch, but they also may pass away.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY
By JACK GAVES
NEW YORK, April 29 — That famous moon came up over that mountain for Kate Smith again when she celebrated her fifteenth anniversary as a singing star of radio.
"When The Moon Comes Over The Mountain" was the very first song Kate sang the night of May 1, 1931, when she started on the CBS network—"opposite Amos 'N' Andy, of all programs; it was difficult to imagine anyone would bother listening to me."
Although she has introduced many famous songs since, this number and "God Bless America" are the two most closely identified with her.
Kate and the program were in a mellow, nostalgic mood at the anniversary.
With her were the two men who have been with her from the beginning—Ted Collins, her producer, manager and friend, and Jack Miller, who played piano for her first broadcasts and has been her orchestra conductor for many years.
The singer recalled that she had quite a bunch of musicians backing her up on that first program—Charlie Spivak, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Mark Warnow, Ted Straeter and Will Bradley, all of whom became famous band leaders. Not even Kate, who merely makes a mint, could afford to hire that crew today.
May 1 is the actual anniversary date, but Friday night's broadcast was used for the observance. May 1 also will be Kate's birthday, and, of course, she will be on the air that day with her five-days-a-week noon broadcast, "Kate Smith Speaks," a joint program which she and Collins started in April, 1938.
Collins, long regarded as one of the smartest of radio showmen and talent beagles, is looking forward to the new radio season starting next Fall when he hopes the evening weekly broadcast will be back on the old one-hour basis.
"There isn't time in a half hour to do a well rounded variety program," Collins said. "With an hour's time you can afford to give the various parts of the program the value they deserve."
"And now that the war is over I want to go back to 'dressing' the show. I mean, putting the people on the program in evening dress. I believe in giving the studio audiences every bit of showmanship that is possible. They shouldn't have to look at people in slovenly or casual attire. They've come to see a show, and proper dress is part of it."
Collins expressed concern over the lack of artistry in some radio shows, claiming that the influence of quiz and stunt programs was responsible. He thinks that television on the grand scale is "years away," largely because of financial reasons, but that pro football is here to stay as big-time outdoor entertainment. As the owner of the Boston club of the American football league, he couldn't very well think otherwise.
One of Collins' pet peeves is that old

"The Authority on Authorities"
A THIRD VITAL FACTOR
EVERY well-schooled player knows the importance of high card strength and total number of playing tricks of all kinds in determining whether an opening bid should be made on a particular hand, or whether a pass is better. But there is another factor which fine bidders consider vital, if the holding is of about borderline merit. That is whether or not major-suit cards predominate, especially spades, or whether the hand is mainly made up of minor-suit cards. In fourth-hand position, after three passes, that factor is most emphatically clear-cut, outstandingly so in match-point duplicate games.

When three passes have reached you in match-point duplicate, you as fourth-hand have only one problem to consider: "If I open this hand, will our side probably get a plus score or a minor score?"
Chances are, after the three passes, that the other hands are of about equal merit. Hence your partner probably has about as good a hand as either of the others. Such being the case, if you have an exact average hand, the chances are that either side can take the same number of tricks as the other, if it becomes the declarer.
Notice that Numbers 1 and 3 are exactly average hands, each containing one ace, one king, one

What Happens When Lymph Glands Stop Working Properly
By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.
THE lymph glands of your body perform much the same function as the oil filter in your car, for the latter filters out dirt, and the former filters out germs and infection.
It is not surprising that, where infection is frequent or of long duration, the filters themselves should become clogged with these toxic materials. When they do, they reverse their role and instead of affording protection, become a source of danger.
Filtering Stations
Now, one of the greatest of these filtering stations is in the throat. It consists of the tonsils and other lymphoid glands there.
Repeated infections of the nose and throat cause these lymphoid glands to work overtime and in the process they increase in size. Then an excessive amount of mucus is formed in the throat which blocks breathing and the opening of the eustachian tubes which lead from the throat to the middle ear.
When in this condition, according to Doctor Gilbert E. Fisher of Birmingham, Alabama, these tissues become very nests of infections, infections which may spread to the sinuses in the nose, the ears, the larynx or voice-box, the windpipe and bronchi, or the small air passages in the lungs.
Lowered Resistance
Furthermore, Dr. Fisher thinks this also lowers the child's resistance to infections. In older children, a condition known as granu-

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE
"THE KNIFE slash? What cushion are you talking about?" Neal puzzled. "Do you mean the one in your room, Jane—the deep rose one I gave you?"
"Of course she doesn't! Margot Ingalls didn't play tag with her murderer all through the apartment!" Deane suddenly joined the conversation. "They mean the cushion she used to shield herself. The other rose one that's still in your room."
"But—how in the world? That was stuck way back out of sight," Neal blurted out. And Hunt asked quickly: "How do YOU know about that cushion, Kennard?"
He didn't raise his voice, and there was no sharpness in his tone, but just the same the room fell silent; after his question and all eyes turned to Deane, probing, shocked, avid with sensation hunger.
"Why—someone told me. I'm not sure who. Someone of the police, I think. Wasn't it—you?" Deane stuttered, made uneasy by the unmistakable doubt all around him.
"It was not," Hunt slowly got to his feet, and this time his voice cut like a knife and he stared at Deane coldly.
Deane wilted under that stare. His face turned a sickly green and his eyes roved about helplessly. Until they found me, and he said with a shaky laugh: "Of course! You're right, Berwick. I remember now it wasn't you—it was Jane! Tell them you told me about the slash in that cushion, Jane, will you?"
His confident assumption that I'd help him lie was such a shock I stared at him for a while mutely before my amazement turning into blazing anger and I found my voice.
"I won't tell them anything of the kind," I heard myself say sharply. "I never mentioned the cushion to you. Kindly stop using me, or my name, as a cover-up."
And then, realizing my words openly accused Deane of Polly's murder, I turned back and ran out of the room and back into mine, locking the door behind me and flinging myself on the chaise longue face down, overcome with horror about what I'd done.
After a while Hunt knocked at my door, saying: "Please, Jane, let me in. I want to speak to you."
But I was afraid he might tell me he'd arrested Deane because of what I'd said, and so I didn't answer. And when he kept on talking I buried my head in Neal's discarded cushion, not to hear what he said. Until, in the end, he shouted in a very annoyed tone: "All right, if you won't, you won't! Good night, Jane!"
After that all became quiet and I lay in a half stupor until another knock aroused me. This time it was Rosa, who announced primly through the door: "Jim bringing your supper, Miss Jane."
I hadn't known I was hungry, but the broth and sandwiches on Rosa's tray looked so inviting I soon found myself eating ravenously under her watchful eyes, to the accompaniment of her picturesque account of the last hour's happenings.

Back Of The Headlines....By Louis F. Keemle
While its fate is being debated at the treaty meeting in Paris, Italy is in a political ferment which presages a radical internal change within less than six weeks.
The first national election since the Fascist era is scheduled for June 2. At the same time, the voters are to decide by referendum whether they want a republic or a monarchy.
The parties and factions engaged in the struggle are varied, and there is such a division of strength among the extreme right, including the monarchists; the center, and the Socialists and Communists on the left that the prospects of a stable single-party government, or even a strong coalition, seem questionable.
For the future outlook, a weak government would provide an ideal opportunity for the Communists or even the sinister Neo-Fascists to make a bid for control of the country.
This political fight is being conducted in a land where the masses see starvation close at hand, unemployment is frightening and a large element of the population is in a dangerous mood, receptive to almost any promised cure.
The Italians are looking to the Paris conference of foreign ministers for some relief from their economic woes. If their stagnated industry and trade is burdened by heavy reparations and other restrictions, the effect might be unfortunate.
The London Daily Mail carried a report from its special correspondent in Rome, Alexander Clifford, in which the writer observed:
"Far too many people are already thinking back to Fascism as 'the good old days' and if this peace treaty business is dodged or shelved or bungled again, Italy may start being a dangerous country once more."
Among the parties and groups involved in the campaign are the following: the Christian Democrats, headed by Premier Alcide de Gasperi, the Socialists, the Communists, the monarchists, L'uomo Qualunque ("common man" party or front), the Democratic Union, a rightist group headed by elder statesmen, the Neo-Fascists, operating underground.
The first three parties, Christian Democrats, Socialists and Communists, are in the coalition government headed by de Gasperi.
The Christian Democrats are the largest single party, but the Socialists under Vice Premier Pietro Nenni have agreed on joint action with the Communists, giving the combination an edge. De Gasperi has come out strongly against the Communists. All three parties will vote for a republic against the monarchy.
The Monarchists have no large party backing but a strong popular following. They are making an energetic bid for Catholic support, and the church itself is believed to favor the monarchy as a proving force for

NEW BAND WILL PLAY AT POLICE AND FIRE BALL

Final preparations were being made Monday for the Police and Firemen's Ball, which will be held Tuesday night in Memorial Hall.

Committees in charge believe they have secured a good band for the revived dance.

Lloyd Gaetz, "the man with the band", has moulded his new band around a set policy of diversity in arrangements, and the band itself has recently welcomed back into its fold many of the men who left for military service during the war. The book of arrangements which is a great part of the smashing successes the band is enjoying has been built around special musical arrangements which the returning members of the band brought with them.

Unlike many other orchestras now starting or returning to the Midwestern musical picture, the Gaetz band is not identified with any single style of playing. Their arrangements are each styled in a different way, some in a Glenn Miller vein, others in the modernistic treatment of Stan Kenton and Boyd Raeburn and still others in a fully instrumented manner that makes either dancing or listening a real experience.

Among the featured members of the Gaetz band are "Nita", the luscious girl who does the luscious vocals; Frank "Acey" Sheehan, whose pianistic have made him one of the top musicians in Ohio; Jerry Tipton, whose work on alto sax and clarinet have given him the nick-name of the man who plays "sax with a soul"; "Dick" Houck with sensationally hot style on tenor sax; and Julian Krupnick, "young man with a horn", who formerly played with the Glenn Miller band.

Lloyd Gaetz himself has long been familiar in musical circles throughout Ohio, operating the Gaetz Music House of Columbus. One of the factors which has made for the amazing success of the band is the fact that Gaetz himself lends his trumpet talents to the band, playing as a member of the brass section rather than in front of his band.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Tracy, Santa Ana, California, were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Dunkle and children at the John Van Dagriff home, North Court street.

Former Victory Gardens Can Help Feed Starving Children

HOME GARDENS CAN SAVE FOOD FOR SHIPMENT

Brehmer Points Out Needs Of Many Residents Of War-Ravaged Lands

An appeal to residents of Circleville and Pickaway county to cultivate vegetable gardens as one means of aiding Europe's starving millions was sounded Monday by Robert L. Brehmer, who was chairman of the Pickaway County Victory Garden Committee during the war.

"Millions of people in Europe are starving," Brehmer declared, "and a large majority of them are children already undernourished by virtue of the war's demands on available food supplies."

"Many are certain to starve during the months ahead before the arrival of autumn."

"The gardens started here as Victory Gardens during the war can again help serve humanity. The knowledge that we gained during the war years will help us to plan our gardens in 1946 to grow more of the substantial food than we can ourselves consume. By so doing, grains and fats can be released for shipment to Europe."

"The reports of our food commission in Europe are not pleasant to think about. We here in America can do a great deal to alleviate this terrible condition. Sure, we did not start the war. Neither did the women and children who are the innocent starving victims."

"Plan right now to make your garden produce right through the entire growing season. Maybe you can get an additional plot of ground on which you can grow some sweet corn and potatoes. Sweet potatoes are not difficult to grow and can be kept for a long time after harvesting, in a dark room where the temperature does not fall below 40 degrees."

"Bury your surplus cabbage, carrots, turnips, and potatoes. Try some potatoes but just remember that the spraying program is the one most important thing in producing a crop of potatoes. Any reasonably good soil will produce a satisfactory crop but a ten day interval spraying program after the

MT. STERLING GIRL WINS IN SPELLING 'BEE'

In a spelling contest which was won by Erma Lee Reichelderfer, Mt. Sterling, on her fourteenth birthday, Sunday at Columbus, Ronnie Melvin, 13-year-old seventh grade student, 411 Franklin street, who represented Circleville schools, was among the top contestants. Melvin remained in the competition until eliminated in the finals and he was awarded a dictionary for his spelling talent.

Forty contestants from all parts of Ohio took part in the competition which was sponsored by a Columbus newspaper. Melvin is Circleville's champion elementary school speller, having won in a series of elimination contests in the city's public schools.

VETERAN STARS IN LAW COLUMBUS—Only Ohio State University senior to win membership this quarter in Coif, law honor society, is Erie H. Bridgewater, Jr., Columbus, veteran of paratroop combat in Normandy and Holland. He is married and has a 22-months' old son.

VETERANS IN REUNION COLUMBUS—The first war veterans' reunion at Ohio State University has been set for June 1, when 53 boys who took Army specialized training in Italian language studies at OSU will return to the scenes of their "student days." Although these men saw service both on the European and Pacific fronts, none was killed or injured in combat.

tops are eight or ten inches high is the thing that will insure a satisfactory return of quality potatoes. "Do not plant your cabbage all at one time. With most crops you will do well to make a succession of plantings. Get bulletins on specific crops at the county agricultural extension agent's office in the basement of the post office. Also get information there for a program of spraying that will protect the fruit from the trees in your yard."

"Every drop of sweat you devote to your garden is going to be a heap of satisfaction in knowing that you have done something to help folks who have been less fortunate than we, in this critical post war period. Pickaway County can do its share."
